

ABSTRACT

A method of operating a processor to perform direct write operations to the processor's registers, including, for example the processor's control and status registers. The method includes receiving data in a processing thread having a processing thread number and loading the data into selected bits of a register according to the processing thread number.